Hach'nasat Or'chim:
Welcome, Guests!

Easy at-home Jewish learning from the ISJL

THE BIG IDEA: Hach'nasat Or'chim (Welcoming Guests)
Since the times of Abraham, our people have thought it important to practice hach'nasat or'chim (welcoming guests). In a time where we may be social distancing, we should think carefully about how we show others hospitality while also keeping everyone healthy. Using the following link, learn about how to welcome guests into your home: https://www.bimbam.com/episode/welcoming/

STORY: And Then Another Sheep Turned Up
Oh, my! More and more sheep continue to show up at the Sheep's family seder! Using the link below, join Mrs. Rosenblum for a funny Passover reading: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=NAE_a5nA1rc

CRAFT ACTIVITY: Be Our Guest!
We love making guests feel welcome. Today, you and your family will create a guest book for visitors to your home to sign. Each member of the family will work together to gather:

- blank paper
- three pieces of string
- crayons/markers
- a hole puncher

Assemble the pages into a book and use the hole puncher to punch three holes onto the side of the book. Then, using the string tie the pages together. Next, as a family, you will decorate the cover of your guest book. You can use family photos, or draw pictures of your family's favorite foods, favorite vacation spots, or anything that is reflective of your family's interests. On the inside cover write, "A message to our guests..." Finish the sentence with a two-to-three sentence statement welcoming guests to your home. Whenever your family has a guest over to your home they should leave a short message about their visit on the remaining blank pages. If you have virtual guests, you can ask them what they'd like to write in there for future guests to know.

ART WHILE TALKING: Ready, Set, Color!

Talk with your child, reflecting on what you learned today, while coloring! You can make one for your child using a black permanent marker, or you can print one at the following link:
